following extract of a note received and the separation of this city:

"T. B. PETERSON—Dear Sir: Whiddifield's Cook Book, recently published by you, and which I purchased at your store, is far superior to any other I have ever seen. As a guide to the young and inexperienced in Domestic Cookery, it has no equal whatever. If must take the piace of all others, and I trust it may meet with the success that so useful a Book deserves."
